To be specific, if the XML serializer in the System.Xml namespace is exactly the same as XSLT 2.0, what is the.NET equivalent to an XSLT 2.0 processor for documents such as XHTML that have their own stylesheets for their own rendering? A: The XML Serializer and XSLT 2.0 (aka XSLT 1.0) provide ways of transforming XML data to another XML format (XML Serializer) or to HTML (XSLT 2.0). The XML Serializer is not used by any control in.NET, as far as I know. What you have described in your question seems to be a XSLT 1.0 processor. You could try Saxon, which is a commercial product. Q: Multiple polygon/line layers from count table in ArcGIS? I also have a layer for each polygon within that bounding box, and I would like to combine these two into a single layer so that I can color the polygon based on the count from the count table. I had hoped that I could either use the output of the 'join count' field to the polygon layer to make a table, and then use the generated color index to color the polygon, or to have the count as a field and use Zonal Statistics in order to derive a color
