Photoshop's Magic Pen Tool Use Photoshop's Magic Pen tool to quickly draw clean, precise lines. The pen tool has several options, including a brush, radial gradients, and the ability to fill a selected area. Double-click the Magic Pen tool to turn it off. The Magic Pen tool works best for drawing lines or shapes. For small areas of color, use the Magic Wand tool. Creating and modifying layers When you create or edit an image, you add and modify layers. A layer is an object that you can manipulate by using the layer menu, image-editing tools, or the layer panel (more on that in Figure 8-1). To create a new layer, press Ctrl+N (#-N). When Photoshop asks whether you want to create a new image layer, click OK. You then see a new empty layer, called a new layer; the layer icon is grayed out. To edit or apply one or more existing layers, see the following list. To edit a layer: Choose Layer=>Layer to activate the Layers panel. Turn on the tab for the layer you want to work on. Double-click to edit the layer. To apply a layer: Choose Layer=>Layer. Choose a layer to apply. Choose Layer=>Layer To Selection (Layer Mask). Alternatively, you can select the layer and click the Layers button on the top of the Layers panel (see Figure 8-2) to activate a menu that includes the Layer To Selection (Layer Mask) command. Figure 8-1: From the menu bar, choose Layers and then click the layer you want to apply. Figure 8-2: The menu options on the top include Layer To Selection (Layer Mask) for applying one layer or all layers. Hatching Hatching is a method of drawing patterns or graphic elements using a series of lines and dots that create a dot-and-line design. It's also used to apply a grid or design pattern to your image. You can add hatching manually or convert an existing image into a hatch pattern

Cognitive biases in children and adolescents with ADHD: The relation with maternal attention and information processing. Cognitive biases may affect children's social interactions and decisions. Little is known about ADHD and social cognition. We examined whether children with ADHD show attention and information processing biases in social scenarios, and if these biases correlate with maternal attention and information processing. 30 children with ADHD (age 10-12) and 30 healthy matched controls completed the Affective Go/No-Go task, a task designed to measure attention and information processing biases, and a maternal information processing task. Children with ADHD showed a behavioral response bias for social errors (relative to neutral errors), particularly when one of the responses involved negative emotions. These biases were not correlated with maternal cognitive processes, but children with ADHD showed a negative correlation between the behavioral response bias for negative errors and scores on a cognitive-emotional bias modification task. Clinical implications and limitations are discussed. Generalized erythema multiforme-like eruption in an infant after cotrimoxazole prophylaxis. The antimicrobial agent cotrimoxazole is frequently used for prophylaxis of opportunistic infections in immunosuppressed patients. Side effects have been reported after oral administration, and very rare reports of cutaneous toxicity and Stevens-Johnson syndrome have been described. We report a case of a 3-week-old boy who developed generalized erythema multiforme-like exanthem after cotrimoxazole prophylaxis.
