Conway said that Trump's trip to the continent represents the 'best story' of his presidency to date, adding that the president has been slowly pulling his team together to make it so. "He's been the leader, he's been the president," Conway said on "Fox & Friends" Thursday. "I think the stories that we're going to be reading and hearing for the rest of his presidency is the one that's about building relationships that will make everybody on the 'Freedom' way to the North Korea." When asked about the president's political footprint, Conway continued to highlight the new relationships that have been made between the U.S. and Europe as the U.S. tries to negotiate with North Korea. "That is to the president's credit

"The first recombinant proteins of any type we produced weren't proteins at all, but a nucleic acid. With recombinant proteins you can make proteins with predetermined characteristics that you didn't have before." The protein already under development by Biota is designed to stimulate the body's immune system. It is designed to bind to the surface of tumor cells. Recombinant proteins are proteins that are made in a laboratory by inserting genetic material from the genome of another, more useful organism into the genome of another species. The DNA, known as a plasmid, is copied and expressed in the cell. Recombinant proteins, which are also known as fusion proteins, can be made by a variety of techniques. The technique Biota is using to create its protein is called bacterial expression. "Bacterial expression has several advantages," Nabel says. "First, it's cheap. It's about $8 a liter, and you can make a lot of it for a very inexpensive price. Second, it's easy to produce."
