You can't sell this theme or other images or modify this theme without prior written permission.Q: Disabling Button in SWIFT I have a button that runs a code that sends a direct sms. I want to disable it until 1 second after it clicks the OK to send. Is there an easy way to do this in swift? I do not want to have to write a million if statements to check a timer or something, and create a timer each time. A: Use a NSTimer to schedule a method that invokes disableButton() with the elapsed time as a parameter. If the disabledButton() method invokes a code to send the SMS, then the SMS function will not run. Edit: Since you are using the button's Touch Up Inside function to invoke the code that sends the SMS, the code must be in an "action" method of the "touch up inside" event. This will allow you to implement the logic to disable the button in a generic way, and execute the code to send the SMS when the user clicks on the button.
