Description: Planisferio forvo maps, political maps, europeans maps, large maps for wall graphics and maps for a jpeg. As a student, I find it useful to keep track of the political divisions in my home country (Lebanon) on a world map. In this example, I created a new blank world map in illustrator. I used Photo Match Match. And then I added a double layer of the Congressional District Map of America to the world map so that I can color the political divisions of the USA on the world map. You can download the result below as a free vector art file (in Adobe Illustrator format) or print it in A4 and in a size of 17" x 25" cm. (7.29" x 8.89" inch). Thank you and have fun! For Those Having Problems With the New Look Here are some words of advice for those having problems with the new "look" on the site. It's a nice change, but some don't seem to like the change at first. I'm making a few changes, too, in a later post. Thanks. Nightingale wrote: First off, I have no idea how this new look came about. I vaguely recall a thread where Kayla had expressed some disdain at the new look and I had asked them to comment about what they were looking for in the site redesign. Next thing I know, it's here. So sorry if it irked you. In the last thread, we did give our suggestions on what the redesign should be about: more air, more light, cleaner and less text. After reading this thread, it seems that Kayla has taken a much more editorial approach and there are a lot of threads. I'm sure this will encourage more discussion at the site, but the less conversation the better. Everyone, please remember that we're trying to create a space to get feedback from people on the re-design. How do you edit this
