Q: The maximal ordering is a maximal linearly ordered chain but the minimal ordering is a linearly ordered chain The maximal ordering of a linearly ordered chain is a linear order, which is an order-preserving with respect to its linearly order structure. How does the Minimal ordering of a linearly ordered chain differ from the Maximal ordering? Does the former have the linear ordering structure in common with the latter? A: Your definition of maximal order is false, because maximal orders are by definition upper bounds in \mathbb{R} , while "maximal orders" typically refers to orders between two incomparable elements, and here, there is no upper bound. The idea of "maximal order" is simply that if $a \leq b$ then either $a=b$ or a

Antibody-dependent cell-mediated cytolysis of HSV-1-infected cells. Innate mechanisms of defense are critical to the host during viral infections, and the ensuing role of adaptive immunity in defense against viral infections is well documented. In the case of the human herpesvirus type 1 (HSV-1), stimulation of both innate and adaptive immune mechanisms results in effective control of a primary infection, but the antiviral defense components are not well understood. We describe in this article a cytolytic activity of peripheral blood mononuclear cells (PBMC) against HSV-1-infected cells that is mediated by cytotoxic T lymphocytes and is antibody-dependent. Results indicated that PBMC were obtained more efficiently from HSV-1-infected persons than from uninfected persons. Peripheral blood lymphocytes exposed to HSV-1 in vitro exhibited a

Q: Get the selected data from the ItemsControl I'm quite new to WPF but I have an ItemsControl. Is there a way to get the selected object from it? The following code does not work: It returns a binding error: "Cannot find a resource named 'Binding'." I also tried this: public class Item { public string Property { get; set; } } public class WindowViewModel : BaseViewModel { public ObservableCollection Items { get; } public WindowViewModel() { Items = new ObservableCollection(); Items.Add(new Item { Property = "a" }); Items.Add(new Item { Property = "b" }); Items.Add(new Item { Property = "c" }); } public void SelectedItemChanged(object sender, RoutedEventArgs e) { // How can I get the selected item? } private void Button_Click(object sender, RoutedEventArgs e) { // How can I get the clicked item? } } A: To get the DataContext of an ItemsControl, use this: var myDataContext = ((ItemsControl) itemsControl).DataContext; Your ItemsControl is an ItemsControl, which means it implements the INotifyPropertyChanged interface. This allows you to subscribe to PropertyChanged events like this: myDataContext.PropertyChanged += SelectedItemChanged; private void SelectedItemChanged(object sender, PropertyChangedEventArgs
