AdvertisementEyewear materials in general (e.g., nonglass ophthalmic eyeglass materials, such as for example, thermoplastic, thermoset polymers, thermoplastic elastomers, thermoset polymers, polyamides, polycarbonates, polyesters, polyacetals, acrylics, silicone, etc.) are quite varied. Generally, the materials are used in eyewear applications such as eyeglass lenses, sunglass lenses, etc. for vision correction, safety, cosmetics, etc. Materials are selected for the ability to provide the desired optical properties. As optical properties are generally fairly related to mechanical properties, materials that provide desired mechanical properties are selected for use in eyewear applications. Many eyewear applications require impact resistance. For example, eyewear used in head protection (e.g., motorcycle or bicycle) or in safety eyewear, such as that used in an environment where an object such as a projectile from a firearm, etc., may strike the eyewear. In these applications, the eyewear can be exposed to impact loading. Impact resistance can be broadly defined as the ability of an eyewear material to resist deformation and/or cracking of the eyewear when exposed to impact. Additionally, many of the eyewear materials are soft and pliable. Pliable materials can be subject to permanent deformation when exposed to impact loading.Cathedral of St. Mary the Virgin (Syracuse) The Cathedral of St. Mary the Virgin, also Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception and formerly Cathedral of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, is a Roman Catholic cathedral located in the city of Syracuse, New York. Spread the love 58 Springfield, MO — A recent report from The Gateway Pundit details how Springfield police are using Taser guns on dogs and other innocent animals. As The Free Thought Project has reported, the sale of stun guns or Tasers has boomed over the last few years despite years of overwhelming scientific evidence proving that these weapons are not effective at stopping violence. Instead of using a stun gun on an incapacitated person who is actively attacking them, police have started using Tasers on innocent animals. There was a time when police were tasked with tacking or shooting livestock that were running away in situations when people were no longer in danger. Now, they're using Tasers and stun guns on dogs and other innocent animals that are just trying to be loving guardians, despite the fact they are trained in doing just that. "I know they use them on dogs," said small animal vet Dr. Heather Rowe of St. Louis County Veterinary. "They just don't want to shoot them or use a gun and I know they use them on horses that are running away and sometimes if you are on a ranch they will use it on you." As TFTP has documented, if you find a Taser in a pet you're dealing with, it's best to take it to a veterinarian immediately so they can attempt to de-taze the dog. Or at least pick the weapon up. "They are not recommended for pets," Dr. Rowe said. "I was amazed that in the area that I live in, that they are using them on animals." The first problem with a Taser is that the device is designed to stop aggression by disrupting the neurological system of the target. However, dogs are not aggressive unless they are threatened by something or someone. If they see another dog that is friendly to them, they will not feel any threat and that is what is happening when these dogs are shocked in the name of reducing violence. There is also evidence that shows that Tasers used on people do not work. As the Free Thought Project reported, the results of a study done by the National Institute of Justice, the study found that "Tasers are generally ineffective to stop large animals of 25 percent of the time." They also showed that under 25 percent of the time the victim was merely startled. The study also warned that
