sodium cyanide in acidic aqueous solution. The kinetic and equilibrium aspects of the dissolution of sodium cyanide from an aqueous solution, NaCN, have been studied. A process controlled by the reaction of the dissolved cyanide ions with the solvent ions to form the neutral cyanide ions, coupled with a transport limited diffusion, is proposed. This model allows an accurate description of the kinetic data in the pH range of 3.5-5.5, also for the reversible part of the adsorption of the sodium cyanide. The validity of the proposed model has been verified by the results of semi-batch experiments and by thermodynamic investigations. Techniques and applications of high-resolution endoscopic imaging in the gastrointestinal tract. Our increasing ability to image the gastrointestinal tract is revolutionizing the practice of surgery. As endoscopic technology is applied more broadly to new areas of medicine, it is likely that early detection of cancer may be improved. Advances in imaging technology will be crucial to this process. To encourage these developments, endoscopic techniques must be proven safe and effective. High-resolution imaging can

Toto still the top dog at New Delhi zoo Zoo chief Sujoy Shankar says it's business as usual with the zoo's two-tonne western lowland gorilla named Toto still the big cheese in the New Delhi zoo. “The zoo is conducting a scientific survey on the primatology of Toto and this will go on for some time,” Shankar said. Toto, who weighs about 2,000 kg or 3,300 pounds, came to the zoo’s Indira Gandhi Zoological Park from the Chitkara Zoo in Rajasthan in 2004, as the last of about a dozen animals who had been brought to India by US adventurer Joseph Muller in 1961. Muller, the adventurer and photographer who travelled widely in South East Asia and the Americas, wrote of the gorillas he encountered, “Gorillas have a delightful charm of their own. They are even more mischievous and mischievous looking than monkeys.” ADVERTISEMENT

Muller captured the first images of Toto, an adult male, as he climbed on top of a zoo keeper in his arms after the veterinarian had anaesthetised the mammal. A Spanish traveller drew the first image of a gorilla in Nepal in 1829, in 1847 a British photographer gave the first images of gorillas in Liberia, the US in 1910, and in 1920 a Dutch government agent took the first known images of a gorilla in China. Toto, however, can be seen in other publications in the 1930s. In the 1970s Toto’s efforts as a male protector of the herd was documented by the legendary French photographer Henri Cartier-Bresson, who captured his first images of the primate in captivity in 1971. Toto was injured several times, including when he attempted to mate with other female gorillas, which led to his death in late 2013. In its website, the zoo says, “This habit of sticking the females is restricted to habituated ones, like Toto. Others, unhabituated, may act aggressively if they feel attacked.”
